Organizing Digital and Hardcopy Materials
by Cath Trindle

Are you flattened by the stacks of material you have collected over the years? Help is on the way.

Cath's presentation was so helpful that many members begged for more! Cath's November program offers that help in a mid-day seminar, 10:00AM to 2:30PM, at the Genealogical Library. There will be ample time for computer demonstrations and consultation with Cath. Attendees may try hands-on methods of record organization. Bring your laptop computer.

Bring your lunch and enjoy sharing experiences.

The November Afternoon Program is at the Genealogical Library.

A Message from our President

Our Society and Library is staffed by a very dedicated group of volunteers. These volunteers serve on the Board of Directors, provide staff to keep the Library open, and work on special projects. Several of our volunteers who serve on the Board of Directors have advised that they will not be able to serve in 2008 due to personal reasons. The positions that will be open in 2008 are the Wine Press Newsletter Editor, and the Ways and Means Chairperson. The Wine Press Newsletter Editor is responsible for compiling the information for the newsletter and putting it into a form that can be published. The Ways and Means Chairperson is responsible for fund raising, which consists of the Wine Collection Drawing. Both of these positions are included in the Board of Directors which meets on the second Monday of the month at 12 noon. If you are interested in serving as a volunteer in one of these positions, please contact the President, Dick Bruechert, at 224-7133 or at kbruechert@aol.com.

LIBRARY CLOSED FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Our Library will be closed for the Thanksgiving Holiday from November 19 through November 24, 2007, and for the Christmas Holidays from December 17, 2007 through January 1, 2008. We will reopen the Library on Wednesday, January 2, 2008 on our regular schedule.

Happy Holidays to all our members,
Dick Bruechert,
NVGBS President

EDUCATIONALLY SPEAKING

Searching for information on USGenWeb has just become easier. A new project allows researchers to search all USGenWeb states, State Special Projects. The Archives and Archives Sub-Projects are excluded because they are hosted by RootsWeb and have their own search capabilities. The idea is to create a one-stop place to search. When you go to the USGenWeb search page, you will see an alphabetical list of states. Those that are indexed and available for searching are hyper-linked to a search page dedicated to that state. In addition, there are links to the Archives, Special and Census Projects. If you have ancestors that moved around, this will definitely make it easier to locate them. (Taken from Internet Gen. magazine - Nov.2007) If you are interested in attending the National Genealogical Society Conference, it will be held May 14-17 2008 in Kansas City, Missouri and is titled "Show Me the Nation's Records." To reserve a room, link to the Hyatt Crown Plaza Hotel at www.ngsgenealogy.org There will be lectures on computer topics, DNA, Gentech, homesteading records, land records, librarian's workshop, Adoption research, writing seminars and many others.

Happy Ancestor hunting., Laura McCoy

Timelines, what will they do for me????

The answer to this is in the November issue of one of my very favorite magazines, Internet Genealogy. David A. Norris has written a very interesting article on the whys and how to's of using timelines. Here is a quick synopsis of the article.

If you are trying to “beef up” your family history to write an article or produce a CD that anyone would enjoy, setting up a timeline can help match personal family events with dates in history. It can give ideas for appropriate illustrations and photos and even adding music of the appropriate time.

[If you are receiving our newsletter online, click on the link to open up that site in your browser or you may be required to hold down the control key (ctrl) and click at the same time with your cursor over the blue link.]

Several websites offer military timelines which can help with research for your ancestor's possible participation in a military engagement. For the “History of the US Army Time Table” look on <http://www.u-s-history.com/pages/h1963.html> For US Sailors and Marines: Naval History Center gives dates from the Revolution to present at <http://www.history.navy.mil/faqs/faq56-1.htm> To be more specific, try the Library of Congress' “Time Line of the Civil War” at <http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/cwphtml/tl1861.html>

For immigration issues, a timeline can help determine what your ancestor lived through and was “escaping” to make a new home in America. The Library of Congress' American Memory site offers such a timeline at <http://memory.loc.gov/learn/features/immig/timeline.html> Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation site http://www.ellisland.org/genealogy/ellis_island_timeline.asp offers a timeline of the happenings at Ellis Island.

Knowing counties where your ancestor were living is crucial to searching for records. There is a site to help with that information by showing county map timelines: http://www.familyhistory101.com/map_county.html

WEBSITE WORTH CHECKING:

Now, this is a very interesting story on Lynne Cheney's research on the family ancestry. Lynne is the wife of Vice President, Dick Cheney.

From the ABC7News.com website comes this:

“This is such an amazing American story that one ancestor ... could be responsible down the family lines for lives that have taken such different and varied paths as Dick's and Barack Obama,” Lynne Cheney told MSNBC.

According to her spokeswoman, Sen. Obama, D-Ill., is a descendent of Mareen Duvall. This French Huguenot's son married the granddaughter of a Richard Cheney, who arrived in Maryland in the late 1650's from England, said Ginny Justice, a spokeswoman for Lynne Cheney. DNA Testing in Genealogical Research

At the October monthly program three experienced society members discussed how they have used commercial tests for DNA.

Sandra Hoover first tackled the question, “What is DNA?” by briefly reviewing it as the substance present in each cell that contains the genes unique for each individual. Through testing for markers on the Y chromosome DNA in the male line or the mitochondrial DNA in the female line and finding similar patterns in individuals in various data bases, the degree of kinship can be determined. She utilizes the on line program of FamilyTreeDNA.com for research as well as its testing service. Janice Brown brought in a DNA kit and explained the testing procedure. Sandra then related how she persuaded an elderly uncle age ninety to agree to cheek swabs and testing for his Y-chromosome DNA. Through Family Tree DNA she was able to find two cousins who could not have been traced via the usual data bases because of differences in the spelling of the family name.

Ruth Jenkins reported how DNA testing of her husband with the use of 12 markers resulted in finding relatives. Researchers can elect to use many more markers, but the cost of the service increases. Brick walls can still occur. Ruth was not able to verify that a female ancestor was a Native American.

The report from Family Tree DNA can be obtained on line. A certificate is issued with extensive information. Also sent is a human DNA migration map indicating the geographic origins of ones ancestors.

This was a very informative program with several persons in the audience sharing their experiences with DNA related searches. The use of this powerful tool is certain to expand. The presenters invited further questions and contacts.

Visiting the Everton Genealogical Collection By Jennifer Francis Pina

On my research trip to Salt Lake City in early October, I decided to visit the Everton Genealogical Collection. It's currently housed on city property in Logan, Utah. Since I had a bit of time in the area (eight days), it made sense to break up the trip with something different. I had been reading about the collection in genealogy magazines and online newsletters, and knew that I'd regret not making the effort. The materials that make up the archive were collected by the Everton family, during the long period of time they published The Genealogical Helper. Authors would send a copy of their works to be reviewed in the magazine. So, the books here are in good shape, having had very little use. There are also odds and ends of newsletters, unpublished manuscripts, surname notes, and small publications. It was the policy of the Evertons not to pass judgment on materials, so they encouraged everything: scholarly works, self-published books with no documentation, and bundles of notes. All can be useful in some way.

I drove in a rental car from downtown Salt Lake City, north and east through Box Elder Canyon, to the beautiful Cache Valley and Logan. Although part of the local library system, the Everton Collection is housed at one end of the Justice Building, where court is held. This means there's a security check, so be prepared leave behind any gadgets that might not pass inspection, like pocket knives or scissors. Inside, the part of the building where the collection is located has a rather unfinished feel, with exposed insulation and the like. The librarian on duty that day, Jason Cornelius, had been most cordial in helping me to arrange my visit. He is the author of many of the magazine articles that appear about the collection. With a dedicated staff of volunteers, but a small budget, he is making headway in getting the place in shape.

When the collection was donated to the city, it wasn't organized in any fashion. The staff is still attempting to get the online catalog complete. It will become easier to assess whether a trip to the library will be of benefit, as more entries are made. My experience was that it was a pleasant journey, and a fun way to spend the afternoon, but I didn't seem to find any materials that wouldn't have been at the Family History Library in Salt Lake City. I cheerfully admit, however, that I may not have spent enough time combing through the card catalog ahead of time, or looking through the un-cataloged filing cabinet full of surname folders.

A word of caution, doing this from Salt Lake City involves a 150-mile round trip, which is a pretty big gulp in one day, especially if you've already done some research in the morning. If I were pressed for time in SLC, I'd probably pass up the Everton Collection. The ideal way to see it would be if you could spend the night in Logan, or could stop on an RV trip. The library is generally open weekday afternoons from 1-6, except Mondays. It's open Tuesdays until 9:00, and one Saturday afternoon a month. Complete information, and a link to the online catalog, is at: <http://library.loganutah.org/genealogy/>.

(Thank you, Jennifer, for sharing this information with us. Hope we all get a chance to take this genealogical adventure. I have really enjoyed browsing the collection through the Internet Link—Editor)

January program : Officer Todd Shulman of the Napa Police Department is our program speaker. Have you ever wished for the skills of a detective as you searched for elusive kin? We will receive exceptional assistance from our speaker. Mr. Shulman is a trained police investigator who has applied his skills to historical research. He has recently published Napa County Police, a history of policing in the Napa Valley, part of the Images of America series, with the Napa Police Historical Society. Mr. Shulman will share his methods as well as his results with us. Join us for this outstanding program. Remember, this is an afternoon meeting, 1:30PM on Thursday, January 17, at the Senior Center, 1500 Jefferson Street. The public is welcome to attend

February program: Mary Herzog is our program speaker. Every genealogist longs for the opportunity to go to all the locations important for his or her research questions and to stay as long as it takes to find the answers. Our Society treasurer, Mary Herzog, has returned from such a journey; eight thousand miles through fourteen states. Mary will share with us her experiences as she traveled with her husband Michael to sites related to the events in her mother's life. We will not only hear about their travels and findings but will also gain some tips on procedure should we contemplate a research trip. Remember this is an afternoon meeting on Thursday, February 21, 2008 at 1:30 PM at the Napa Senior Center, 1500 Jefferson Street, Napa. The public is welcome to attend.
